COLLEGE OF LAW

MARJORIE F. KNOWLES, DEAN

INTRODUCTION

The 1987-88 year has been one of the most productive in the short history of the College of Law. The College developed, approved, and implemented a conversion to the semester system that will be inaugurated this summer. The conversion entailed a complete restructuring of the curriculum as well as significant changes in policies and procedures governing registration, financial aid, student records, tuition, and payroll. The College and the University began the first phase of the expansion of the College of Law's facilities by the hiring of an architect, followed by the development and approval of schematic drawings for the renovation. Furthermore, the Dean and the Site Evaluation Team which visited the school on behalf of the American Bar Association received a commitment from the Chancellor of the University System that the remaining money needed to complete the $4.5 million project will be available July 1, 1989.

In accordance with its provisional accreditation status by the American Bar Association, the College of Law undertook its annual self-study and successfully experienced an on-site visit by a team of legal educators appointed by the A.B.A. Further evidence of the productive year can be found in the success of GSU students in inter-collegiate competitions, most notably winning the National Moot Court Competition sponsored by the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, the productivity of the law faculty, and the number of noted speakers and guests who visited the College of Law, particularly Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia, Professor Stephen Gillers, Professor John Morris and Professor John Kaplan. A new administrative structure was implemented and several new administrators were recruited to manage new organizational units.

FACULTY

The faculty of the College of Law has been very productive during this year. In addition to continuing the tradition of excellent teaching, faculty members have been active in research as well as community and professional service. The faculty has continued to engage in scholarly research and to publish in a variety of vehicles. A description of some of the recent work of each faculty member is set forth below:

Ronald Blasi has published The Banking Industry, the ninth volume in a series of the Tax Transactions Library Service published by Commerce Clearing House. He has recently become a regular columnist for the Banking Law Journal. In December 1987, he presented a report on current developments in bank taxation at the annual meeting of the Bank Tax Institute. He is also preparing a study of the New York State Bank Tax Statute at the request of that State's Legislative Tax Study Commission.

Dianne Brinson's article entitled "Proof of Economic Power in Tying Arrangement Cases involving Copyrighted or Patented Tying Products" has been published in the Louisiana Law Review. The West Publishing Company has also accepted for publication in its textbook Georgia Methods of Practice a chapter by her on "The Corporation-Buying or Selling a Going Business."

James Bross is the Keeping Current/Real Property Editor for the American Bar Association Probate and Property Magazine. His work with Robert Chastain entitled "The 'Right to Exclude' in Taking Cases: Holmes' Rhetoric and Felix Cohen's Holdings" is in progress.

George Carey published the lead article, entitled "Tax Aspects of Divorce and Separation and the Innocent Spouse Rules" in the Georgia State University Law Review issue devoted to legislative issues. He has underway a pilot study of the divorce case records of DeKalb County, Georgia, seeking to determine the effect of changes in the tax law on patterns of divorce settlements and judgments. If these data prove interesting, he anticipates seeking funds for a larger scale study of this issue.

Norman Crandell served as Faculty Advisor to the Georgia State University Moot Court Team that won the Southeastern Regional and then the National Championship in the City Bar Association of New York National Moot Court Competition, and to the GSU Team that placed third nationally in the Wagner Cup (Labor Law) Moot Court Competition. He also recently presented a paper entitled "The Law of Warranties" at the Conference of the Georgia Association of Purchasing Agents.

Anne Emanuel has had accepted for publication a paper entitled "The Concurrent Sentence Doctrine Dies a Quiet Death - Or Are the Reports Greatly Exaggerated?"

Jodie English presented the "Opening Statement for the Defense" at the Midwinter meeting of the Georgia Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers, and served as a faculty member for the Georgia Institute of Trial Advocacy (ICLE) at Mercer University Law School.

William Gregory is preparing the second edition of Reuschlein and Gregory's Hornbook on the Law of Agency and Partnership. His piece on "Business Organizations" will appear in the West Publication, Georgia Methods of Practice.

Bernadette Hartfield recently presented her latest work entitled "Equitable Division of Property" to the Family Law Section of the State Bar of Georgia. She is serving as a consultant to the Family Law Section.

Lynn Hogue had his paper on "Regulating Business Activity by Means of the Substantive Due Process and Equal Protection Doctrines under the Georgia Constitution: An Analysis and a Proposal" published as the lead article of the Georgia State University Law Review symposium issue on the Georgia Constitution and the New Ascendancy of State Constitutional Law. He participated in several activities honoring the Bicentennial of the United States Constitution, including the panel on "We Hold these Truths: Governor's Day Seminar on the U.S. Constitution" at the Atlanta University Center.

Nancy Johnson, who is also the GSU Law Librarian, recently issued a 1988 supplement to her reference book, Sources of Compiled Legislative Histories (Rothman, 1979). She is working on a new edition of Legal Research Exercises (West, 1986) which is used by first-year students. She also recently published an article in the Law Library Journal entitled "Comparable Worth in Libraries: A Legal Analysis."

Steven Kaminshine recently completed a multi-chapter work on Worker's Compensation in Georgia to be included in the upcoming West Publication, Georgia Methods of Practice. He was recently appointed to the Institute of Industrial Relations in the GSU School of Business, and has been designated as the permanent labor arbitrator in several collective bargaining agreements. Along with Norman Crandell, he served as Faculty Advisor to the GSU National Championship Moot Court Team in the regional and national rounds of the City Bar Association of New York National Moot Court Competition, and to the GSU team that placed third nationally in the Wagner Cup (Labor Law) Moot Court Competition.

Marjorie F. Knowles, Dean of the College of Law, served as a member of the Executive Committee and of the National Advisory Committee for the February, 1988 Conference on "Women and the Constitution - A Bicentennial Perspective" held at the Carter Presidential Center in Atlanta.

Ray Lanier was the American organizer of, and participated along with lawyers and university representatives in the Second Annual German-American Comparative Law Study Program. Activities included in the study trip to West German were visits to the Federal Constitution Court, the Federal Supreme Court, the Bavarian Ministry of Justice and other legal agencies. A grant from the West German Foreign Ministry supported the program.

David Maleski is preparing a book on "Sociobiology and the Law of Risk." He has also recently completed a 1987 supplement to his book "Proof of Causation in Private Tort Actions in Georgia."

Charles Marvin, Associate Dean, is preparing a paper on "Decision-Making and Administrative Procedure" for the Law Reform Commission of Canada. He also served as a judge in the Canadian National Round of the 1988 Jessup International Moot Court Competition.

Paul Milich presented a seminar on Georgia Rules of Evidence for Administrative Law Judges and Hearing Officers at the Institute of Continuing Legal Education at the University of Georgia. He was honored with the award of Outstanding GSU Law Professor by the graduating class of 1987.

Mary Radford will have her recent article on "Unemployment Benefits for Pregnant Women and New Mothers" published in the New York University Law Review this summer. She presented a lecture entitled "Estate Planning Provisions of the Tax Reform Act of 1987" for the Institute of Continuing Legal Education in Athens, Georgia and a lecture on "Sexual Stereotyping: Gender Discrimination in Sheep's Clothing" for the Principal's Institute at Georgia State University. She has been appointed to the Advisory Board for Corporate Health Magazine.

Charity Scott has an article entitled "A Broker-Dealer's Civil Liability to Investors for Fraud: An Implied Private Right of Action under Section 15(c)(1) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934" to be published in the Indiana Law Journal. She lectured on "College Women - The Myth of Having It All" at a recent workshop sponsored by GSU Women's Life and Development Program.

Patricia Siuta joined the faculty this year as an Assistant Professor and as Director of Lawyer Skills Development.

Roy Sobelson had an article entitled "Lawyers, Clients and Assurances of Confidentiality: Lawyers Talking Without Speaking, Clients Hearing Without Listening" accepted for publication by the Georgetown Journal of Legal Ethics. He recently participated in a National Institute of Trial Advocacy Workshop in Philadelphia. He is very active in the State Bar of Georgia, being a member of the Formal Advisory Opinion Board and of the Code of Professional Responsibility Committee, and a Trustee for the Clients' Security Fund.

Corneill Stephens is responsible for the preparation of several parts of the coming edition of Georgia Methods of Practice. He recently conducted a seminar for AT&T on Contract Administration. He also serves as a Magistrate in DeKalb County.

Kathryn Urbonya had her recent article entitled "Establishing a Deprivation of a Constitutional Right to Personal Security under Section 1983: The Use of Unjustified Force by State Officials in Violation of the Fourth, Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments" accepted for publication in the Albany Law Review.

Patrick Wiseman has had three articles accepted for publication in the last year. His article on "Denial of Treatment to Handicapped Newborns: In Whose Interest?" appeared in the last edition of the Georgia State University Law Review. His piece entitled "Deferring to the Judgment of Mental Health and Related Professionals in Striking the Constitutional Balance Between Individual Liberty and the Interests of the State" will appear in the Columbia Human Rights Law Review, and "First English's Regulatory Takings Analysis: Is Compensation for a Landowner's Temporary Frustration of Economic Expectations Justified?" will be published in Urban Law and Policy. He is a Certified Arbitrator with the Fulton County Superior Court Civil Arbitration Program, and a Certified Mediator at the Justice Center of Atlanta.

There has been substantial support for faculty development activities this past year. Each faculty member who requested the services of a law student as a research assistant was provided with one. The College allocated $51,000 to secure these services for the faculty during this fiscal year, and currently 23 students are assigned as assistants to an equal number of faculty to foster research and publication. In addition, all faculty members who prefer to spend the summer in research activities rather than teaching were granted research grants. Such grants totaled $82,000 for the 1987 summer term.

As mentioned in the 1986-87 annual report Charity Scott and Patricia Siuta joined the faculty this past year. Also added to the faculty were four Research, Writing and Advocacy instructors who were hired on one year temporary contracts. These are Laurie Remter, Laurie Ross, Lori Fisher, and Susan Garrett.

The College initiated recruitment for two senior faculty members that were newly funded with the 1987-88 year. It is expected that an additional year or two of recruitment will be necessary to identify the appropriate persons. It should be noted that for the 1988-89 year, the Academic Vice President has borrowed from the College of Law's budget the $100,000 salary appropriated for one of these Senior faculty positions. This money will be returned to the law school budget for FY 1990.

Kathleen Marcel, Associate Professor in the College of Law, will be leaving Georgia State at the end of the 1987-88 contract period. This past year a faculty search was conducted by Mary Radford, Chair of the Faculty Recruitment Committee, to identify a replacement for Professor Marcel. Patricia Morgan of University of Mississippi Law Center has accepted the College of Law's offer and will begin work with the Fall Semester, 1988.

STUDENTS

The College of Law has always regarded participation in student organizations as an important part of the legal education experience and, for this reason, has encouraged the creation and activities of a wide variety of student organizations, some traditionally found in law schools, some less common. The Student Affairs Committee and the Assistant Dean exercise an oversight function with regard to the various student organizations of the College. Within the limits of available resources, the College supports existing and new student organizations with office space, use of classrooms for meetings when they are not used for classes, secretarial and copying support for academic activities and, in some cases, direct funding. We are proud of the accomplishments of these student organizations and will continue to support and encourage them. It is our hope that resources, especially space, will permit even greater support in the future. Some of the more significant activities of this year are highlighted here.

The National Moot Court Team emerged victorious in the Association of the Bar of the City of New York's National Moot Court Competition. This marks the first time in the 38 year history of the prestigious competition that a Georgia law school has become National Champion. GSU College of Law students Linda Birchall, Craig Dowdy and Rebecca Jones comprised this year's national championship team. Professors Norman Crandell and Steven Kaminshine are faculty advisors.

The Georgia State University Law Review has been brought back on schedule this year, with the appearance of two issues and another issue to be published in June. Volume 3, No. 2 contained the first Henry J. Miller Distinguished Lecture, "Lawyers and the Supreme Court: Of Means and Ends" by Dean Murray L. Schwartz. The annual review of all legislation passed in Georgia--The Peach Sheets--appeared in the same issue, which was dedicated to the late Representative Peggy Childs, a graduate of the law school.

For the first time, the Student Bar Association received $15,000 from the Student Government Association for the financing of all law school organizations, excluding moot court and law review, which are separately budgeted. These funds gave organizations access to the student activities fees which are paid each quarter by all law students. The SBA established a procedure to dispense these funds to the student organizations within the Law School.

The SBA appointed student representatives to the Library and Student Activities Committees. It established a committee of students to interview prospective professors and a committee on curriculum to give input to the administration about student needs. The SBA reviewed the class schedule for the year and each exam schedule for potential problems. The SBA organized an orientation party for new students, a picnic for the students, faculty and staff, and a variety talent show. The SBA provided a coffee service for the students and marketed spirit items such as sweat shirts and tee shirts. The SBA rewrote the SBA constitution to reflect more adequately the needs of the students, submitted a smoking referendum to the students, and held an election for faculty member of the year.

During the year 1987-88, the Association of Women Law Students (AWLS) has been involved in a variety of activities. These activities began prior to classes starting in September, 1987. During pre-orientation and again during orientation a member of the Board of Directors of AWLS spoke to the incoming law class about the organization. In the Fall Quarter, there were two meetings at which Dean Knowles spoke about her experiences as a woman in the legal profession and answered questions; one of these was held at noon to accommodate day students, and one was held at 5:00 p.m. to serve those students who attend school at night.

During Winter Quarter, AWLS held two discussion sessions. At each of these, the members brought out concerns that they felt AWLS should be addressing. In addition, Dean Knowles' request that AWLS provide a forum for any student experiencing sexual harassment was discussed. In partial response to this request and at the suggestion of several students, a committee was formed to work with the Placement Office in determining what statistics are available concerning interviews, call backs, and employment offers. The statistics that were of special concern were those involving sex, race, and age of the students. The Placement Committee is in the process of collecting its information and as soon as the statistics are complete, a report will be issued. AWLS is also gathering nominations for the outstanding third-year law student who has best represented women's interests and who will continue to do so in the future. The nomination will be submitted to the National Association of Women Law Students. Activities for the Spring include a speaker, and the showing of videos to aid students during Spring job recruitment.

The Student Trial Lawyers Association (STLA) sponsored talks by two experienced and high-respected judges, as well as a workshop on the Georgia State Bar's newly-enacted litigation requirement. An additional speaker will complete the year's program. STLA also entered three trial competitions after conducting in-house competition to choose the members of each team.

The National Lawyers Guild has participated in three major projects this year. The Guild hosted and co-sponsored, with the Atlanta area National Lawyers Guild chapter, a seminar on Section 1983 litigation, and the Southeastern Regional Convention of the Guild. Two sessions were held to train volunteers to prepare them to represent adequately Cuban detainees in their administrative hearings. Some members represented detainees from the Atlanta Penitentiary and after the riot, Fort Gordon and the Federal Correctional Institution at Talledega, Alabama. The Guild is involved in a long-term project to set up a fund which would assist those graduates who enter public interest law pay off their student loans. In conjunction with this project, one member attended a National Association of Public Interest Law conference last December. In addition, the Guild co-sponsored, with the Placement Office, a seminar on alternative legal careers.

The Environmental Law Society (ELS) has sponsored several speakers this year on such topics as the expert witness in zoning and condemnation cases, acid rain and the decline of forests in the southeast, and the environmental responsibilities of corporate polluters. There are plans for two additional speakers during the spring quarter. The ELS is exploring the possibility, with other student organizations, of establishing a University Chapter of the Georgia Conservancy.

The Student Affairs Committee of the College of Law is charged with responsibility in six areas related to the academic and professional life of the students in the College of Law: (1) Academic Standards, (2) Academic Standing, (3) the Code of Student Conduct, (4) Student Affairs, (5) Student Organizations, and (6) Placement.

There are four faculty members of the Committee, which is chaired by the Associate Dean for Students, a student representative, and the Placement Director, ex officio.

The Committee has spent a good deal of time coordinating its work with that of the Curriculum Committee and the Special Committee on Conversion to the Semester System in order to ensure that appropriate academic schedule and program to a semester system in the summer of 1988. In addition, one of the primary functions of the Committee is that of making recommendations to the Dean on applications for readmission on probation of students excluded for deficient academic performance.

Again in conjunction with efforts by the Curriculum Committee, the Student Affairs Committee is studying proposals to provide structured faculty advisement for all students, with particular attention being given to first-year students. Attention is also being given to what contents should be in a new Student Handbook and in the College of Law Bulletin.

Various issues arose during the past year concerning the Code of Student Conduct and the organization of the Student Honor Court. Much of the Committee's time is being spent on proposed revisions to the Code of Student Conduct and on restructuring the Honor Court.

Considerable activity has taken place during the 1987-88 academic year in connection with student affairs matters - the identification of student concerns and the coordination of faculty responses thereto. Dean Knowles has continued the practice first established in 1986 of meeting periodically in open forum with the student body to communicate to them what important developments are occurring concerning the law school, and to ascertain and respond to student concerns.

Administrative and student affairs calendars focused on quarterly, monthly and weekly activity schedules have been set up in the student lounge to help identify, coordinate and monitor law school events. Also, students have been appointed as ex-officio members of the faculty committees on the Curriculum, the Library, and Student Affairs in order that there might be more student involvement in school administration and more effective communication and feedback between the faculty and the student body.

The Student Affairs Committee continues to show active concern in the effective job placement of graduates of the College of Law. Indeed, as was already mentioned, the Placement Director is an ex-officio member of the committee. The principal focus of committee concern at this time is on the allocation of space and time for any interviews conducted on campus by recruiting attorneys from firms, corporations and government agencies.

In January 1988, the College of Law obtained the services of an Assistant Dean for Student Affairs, Raytheon Rawls, and the Student Affairs Committee was glad to allow her to assume a number of oversight functions relating to student organizations and legal associations that the Committee had previously operated by default. The Committee continues to be charged with any matters concerning relations between the faculty and those bodies. Individual faculty members serve as advisors to almost all recognized student organizations.

INSTRUCTION

In keeping with its mission, the College of Law offers high quality legal education program leading to the Juris Doctor (J.D.) degree to both full and part time students. For this past year, nine quarters were required in residence for full time students and fifteen quarters were required in residence for part time students. With the College of Law's conversion to the semester system with the 1988 summer term, six semesters will be required for full-time students, and nine semesters will be necessary for part-time students.

Much work was done this past year by the Curriculum Committee and the Ad Hoc Committee on Conversion to the Semester System to convert all courses to the new system and produce a new catalogue of course descriptions for students. This process resulted in some major changes to a few courses while leaving most courses relatively unchanged.

The required Litigation course was changed from a year-long course to one semester without any diminution of class hours. The Litigation classes will meet twice as often during the semester than they currently meet, resulting in a shorter but more intensive program.

The required constitutional law sequence was restructured to provide two semesters of course work covering state-federal relationships, individual civil rights, and an introduction to constitutional issues in the criminal context. These two semesters replace four ten week courses that cover much the same material under the current quarter system in constitutional law and criminal procedure.

The Committee is currently working in conjunction with the Student Affairs Committee and the Assistant Dean on programs to improve student academic advisement. Among the programs being developed are an evening workshop for students on curriculum planning, a system for assigning students to faculty for counseling, and the preparation of a handbook for distribution to the students describing various course areas (e.g., commercial law, criminal law, international law), the courses in those areas, the order in which they should be taken, and so forth.

As of February 1988, the Committee had reviewed four new course offerings that were subsequently approved by the full faculty:

- Seminar on Transnational Litigation
- Complex Litigation
- Law and the Social Sciences
- Drafting of Wills and Trusts

The Ad Hoc Committee on Conversion to the Semester System addressed four major areas this past year: (1) the selection of a semester calendar; (2) the conversion of the curriculum; (3) the coordination of certain administrative changes with the University; and (4) the need to educate the student body and anticipate transition problems.

The Committee examined semester calendars at several law schools and selected the most prevalent model: a 14 week fall semester beginning the last week of August, with final exams concluding before the holiday break; a 14 week spring semester beginning in the second week of January, with a mid-term break in March and with final exams in early May; a 7 week summer session beginning in mid-May with exams ending by mid-July. These semester periods, which refer only to classroom instruction and do not include examination or reading periods, comply with ABA Standard 305(a), Interpretation 2. The faculty approved this calendar on January 12, 1988. It subsequently was approved by the appropriate bodies within Georgia State University.

Recommendations for converting the curriculum and allocating semester credit hours were developed jointly by the Ad Hoc Semester Committee and the Curriculum Committee. To aid the committees, faculty members submitted proposals for their respective course areas. The joint committees then reviewed these proposals and submitted a report, with recommendations, for faculty approval. The faculty approved these recommendations at a special meeting on January 12, 1988. The faculty subsequently submitted revised course descriptions to the Associate Dean for distribution to the student body.

The changes in the law school program can be summarized as follows: (1) credit hours for graduation will convert from 135 quarter hours to 90 semester hours; (2) year-long courses in the first year program will convert on a 2/3 basis from 9 quarter hours to 6 semester hours; (3) sequence courses offered over 2 quarters for 6 hours generally will be consolidated into 3-credit semester courses, except for Evidence which will become a 4-credit semester course; and (4) free-standing quarter electives will be offered as 3 or 2-credit semester courses.

INSTITUTIONAL EFFECTIVENESS

In general all planning conducted in the College of Law is guided by the Standards for Accreditation as established by the American Bar Association. Using these standards as guidelines each year, the College establishes both short and long range objectives as required by the instructions for completing a required annual report. These short and long range objections are assessed periodically throughout the year, and a description of the College's accomplishments are detailed in the ABA's Self-Study and Annual Reports each year.

Specifically, college effectiveness in planning evaluation and research is defined as the ability of its students to achieve their educational and professional goals and the ability of faculty members to accomplish their responsibilities in the areas of teaching, research/professional communications, and public service. Effectiveness in the quality of the program is measured against how it is perceived by our students, graduates, local and State Bar Associations and the American Bar Association. We measure our effectiveness by performance of our students as shown by scores on final examinations, skills displayed in formal writing requirements, feedback from the Courts and legal community on externships and clerkships, performance by our Moot Court Teams at Regional and National Competitions, and percent of our students who pass the State Bar Examination. Measures of faculty effectiveness include such things as assessment on the quality of syllabi and instructional resources used in classes, assigning grades according to clearly delineated criteria, peer review of teaching through classroom observations, and review of student course evaluations. Faculty are also expected to engage in appropriate research and scholarly communications. Effectiveness is measured by acceptance of research for publication in scholarly journals, in law reviews, by book publishers, government agencies, Bar and other professional organizations; acceptance or papers for presentation at Bar and professional meetings; acceptance of creative projects for publication and/or production. A listing of faculty publications is included in each of the Annual Reports from the College of Law.

All faculty are also expected to serve in various capacities in the College, University, and large community (especially the legal community). These efforts include chairing and serving on committees, directing projects, and developing courses and programs. In addition, faculty are expected to perform service to the community and legal profession by conducting workshops and seminars for continuing legal education, delivering speeches and consulting as well as serving on the various committees of the Bar. Effectiveness, in this area, is judged by feedback from client groups, evaluation reports from CLE programs, and the extent of awards and professional recognition gained by individual faculty.

The evaluation procedure established in the College specifies that the Dean shares feedback in the three major areas of responsibility for faculty, i.e., teaching, research, and public service. In the area of teaching, the Dean shares feedback with individual faculty and groups of faculty on an ongoing basis. The information includes student results on final course examinations, feedback on student evaluations of courses and passage rate of the Bar Examination. During an annual faculty evaluation conference, the Dean discusses this information with each faculty member, and also discusses the research and publication efforts of each faculty member, establishing goals in this area. During the evaluations, the Dean shares information about the effects of public service, discusses the previous year's contributions, and helps faculty establish goals for the coming year.

This annual Report includes information about research and publication achievements and the public service contributions of each faculty member. As a result of this ongoing planning and evaluation process, the College of Law has an effective plan for reviewing its programs, faculty, and its students in relation to the stated purposes of the College of Law.

STAFF

A new organizational structure was implemented with the beginning of the 1987-88 fiscal year. Following a year of planning, this new administrative organization essentially separated the responsibilities of the previous Assistant Dean into several new components. The new staff leadership consists of Robert Shuford, Director of Administration, Barbara Pitts, Director of Development, and Raye Rawls in the newly-established position of Assistant Dean for Student Affairs, with responsibility for Admissions, Records, Placement and student organizations. The role of the Associate Dean was more clearly delineated with this new structure, with all of the top administrators, except for the Director of Development, reporting to him. Making the changes even more dramatic, the Associate Dean of last year, Lynn Hogue, returned to full-time teaching and was replaced by another senior member of the College's faculty, Charles Marvin.

LAW LIBRARY

The Law Library continues to grow both in holdings and in use by students, faculty, and the legal community. The anticipated growth of the collection for FY 1987-88 will be in the area of 9,000 to 10,000 volumes. The use of the Law Library by the legal community increased over 20% from the previous year. All law firms in town have in-house access to our online catalog.

The inadequate space for the library collection is one of the major faults identified by the American Bar Association. As of May, 1988 the library shelf space was filled to 85% capacity, the maximum limit allowed by the A.B.A. Projected statistics are as follows:

January, 1989	108,354 volumes or 89% capacity
January, 1990	118,354 volumes or 98% capacity
January, 1991	128,354 volumes or 106% capacity

It is obvious that the renovation and expansion of the facilities of the College of Law should proceed as swiftly as possible.

ACCREDITATION

The College of Law received provisional accreditation in 1984, very early in its history. While there have been other issues raised by the American Bar Association's Committee on Accreditation, the major remaining issue for final accreditation is adequate space for the College of Law. The administration of Georgia State University has agreed to give the College of Law space on the second, third, and fourth floors, in the Urban Life Center, immediately above its present ground floor location, in order to provide adequate space for the College of Law. The architect's estimate for the conversion of the space for the College of Law is $4.5 million.

A million dollars from the University's Major Repair and Renovation fund has been allocated to this project for FY 89. Architectural drawings, bid documents, and construction of a portion of the fourth floor will be covered by this money. In a meeting with the Site Team sent on behalf of the A.B.A. and Dean Marjorie Knowles in early May of 1988, Chancellor Propst committed to providing the remaining funds in July 1989. The College of Law will continue working with the administration of the University and of the University System to try to see that this project is done as quickly as physically possible.

The annual Site Evaluation was conducted in May. The only deficiency noted by the Team, in addition to space, was the lack of scholarship funds for law students.

COMPUTER SUPPORT

The College of Law continues to be frustrated by the inability of the University to provide appropriate computer support to the College of Law. The College has to produce its own grade reports and transcripts because Georgia State University is unable or unwilling to provide these documents in a form acceptable to the College and to the legal community. The College also produces data on class rankings from the student database it maintains. While this had been thought to be a temporary problem, the College is now in its sixth year and the University still cannot accommodate the College's needs. On a positive note, the University has begun to acknowledge the separate nature of its only professional school and seems more willing to let the College provide for its own needs in its own distinct manner.

With the planned conversion to the semester system beginning with the summer term of 1988, the College is confronted again with the fact that the University is unable to give full support to the College in the area of student registration. (The University will remain on the quarter system.) The College has been able to arrive at a temporary solution to the registration problem, but the future may very well require the Office of Information Services to develop its own registration process for the law school.

OBJECTIVES AND RECOMMENDATIONS

A review of one-year objectives contained in the College of Law's 1986-87 Annual Report reveals that most have been accomplished. For those objectives that have not yet been met, support or resources from outside the College have not been forthcoming to make the successful completion of these goals possible.

The College had hoped for the completion of the planning and funding of the expansion and renovation. The planning will be completed this summer, with construction starting in October for the first phase of the project. Funding will not be complete until July of 1989. As a five year objective, the College of law continues to work for full A.B.A. accreditation.

The Dean requested but did not receive funding for a client clinic during the 1988-89 budget development process. This will be included in the College of Law's budget request for FY 90.

The goal of adding additional personnel with administrative, budgeting, and developmental expertise was accomplished with the hiring of Robert Shuford, Barbara Pitts, and Raytheon Rawls.

A goal for this past year has been the implementation of a semester-based calendar for the College of Law. After much work including a complete review of the curriculum for the J.D. program, the semester conversion will be completed with the June registration for the summer term.

Another successful project has been the completion of the college-wide computer network that allows, among other things, the on-line capability of determining students' grade point averages and class rank.

In the Law Library, the past year has seen the development of a computer lab for students and the improvement of public photocopy services.

For the coming year the College has established as its goals the following:

- * Complete Phase I of the renovation project by which the College of Law will expand into floors two, three, and four of the Urban Life Center.

- * Secure funding for the remaining portion of the renovation project.

- * Increase scholarship funds to better attract and retain outstanding students.

- * Complete the transition to the semester system.

- * Secure a 15% increase in acquisition funds for the Law Library.

- * Secure funding for the establishment of a client clinic.

- * Identify additional funding sources for faculty development.

- * Purchase and install a registration system for the College of Law's semester curriculum.
